The Drama Continues

The tales of the somewhat unmitigated disaster that is ‘The Lap’ continues. We’ll reveal the entire sorry details of the trip so far in a future instalment.

Hint. The window is not the only drama.

Today however, after an eventful day in the big smoke yesterday with a gazillion errands to run; we’re back in Wyalkatchem with the window that isn’t (happy bloody birthday Michael ?).

Camec, after three months to craft a replacement window they originally supplied, decided, despite the measurements sent to them, to send the wrong size! No idea how a square window would fit a rectangular frame, but hey …

Fortunately, Justin Fitzgerald and the workshop team at Northside Caravans have rigged up a sealed acrylic panel that at least gives us some security and the ability to move on and see the rest of the Wheatbelt we haven't yet done.

Light out they said, go see Australia they said … ?
